The Democratic Rally.

Hon. Murcus A. Smith could bardly feel flattered at the reception he received at the hands of the Pima County Demogracy last evening. The gathering was both small and unenthusiastic. Mr. Webb, the democratic candidate for county clerk who was suffering with Peopeylyania ranch on the brain, occupied to the disappointment of his friends, much of the evening and over hadowed the congressional aspirant. Later when Mr. Smath could put in a few words he thanked the and ence for their patience, stated a few of his wants and the wants of the territory as he saw them, and then isst down to rest, Hon, C. land, and showed to all the falacy of the new property how he had a specific and showed to all the falacy of the contract matters and ladies that they have been slighted by the civilization of their political, moral and Among the ladies, however, the loose gowns of the olden days are still popular, but eve these are gradually growing obsolete, and at fashionable balls the European dress is generally assumed, while the programmes of the Japanese orchestras generally include the best of English music.

BANGS AND WHITE TEETH. The odd yet picturesque style of hair dres ing which has so long prevailed in the coun try has been superseded by that of the American women, and the fair foreheads of the royal ladies are already hidden by the bang so common in our own country. The fashions wever, are not set by the empress. The style adopted by the minister's wives is considered quite the proper thing, and, following their example, all ladies of culture have dropped the custom of blacking their teeth and shaving their eyebrows.

"The intellectual progress of the people of Japan," said Mr. Eastlake, "has been almost unparalleled. Not only has the educational system been established all over the empire, but the capital city boasts of a university that can compare favorably with the best colleges of the continent. German professors, promi nent for scientific ability and research, have filled the chairs in the scientific and medical departments of the Imperial university, while in literature, both ancient and modern, English and American men of advanced thought have been chosen as instructors. Recently the staff of foreign professors has been diminished and the vacancies filled by Japanese literati who have returned from study abroad. "The works of Huxley, Spencer, Darwin and others have been translated into Japanese, and are familiar handbooks to students in Japan. The promulgators of Christianity find that they have a proud skepticism to contend with. The Japanese talk of the evolution of species' and the nebular hypothesis as glibly as our learned men. Buddhism is still the predominating faith, but Christianity is rapidly establishing itself among the more ntellectual classes, although many of the high officials express extreme bitterness to the doctrine and its introduction. This bitterness is so great that to profess Christianity means the loss of an official position. The people are not conservative, however, and it is only a question of time when the Christian faith will be accepted throughout the country. In all the large cities public school tained, and it is compulsory that after attaining a certain age children shall be sent to school. In Tokio there are two large law schools, one of which is conducted in the French and the other in the English language. Added to these is an engineering college, with its library of over 20,000 volumes and its extensive laboratories, which have been recent merged with the Imperial college. THE EMPEROR'S PROMISES. "Political affairs are not behind in the on ward march of civilization, and the chief ex citement of the country now is the preparaion for the national assembly promi-1880. The ground is already purchased and the assembly buildings commenced, although there is naturally some misapprehension or the part of suspicious minds that the govern nent may not carry out its promises to the people. As it now stands, the government is in the hands of the emperor, assisted by the senate and house of lords, which in Japanese is called 'Gen-ro-in.' The national assembly will be composed of representatives elected by the people from the various districts into which the country is divided, thus making the empire a partial republic. Laws regarding press criticism and public speech are very stringent, and in neither is criticism of the governs ent allowed. Regarding Japan's relations with America I am able to speak at terest of an extension of the mercant but when they arrived at the house a few | traffic. The United States and its people are mediately pursuit was instituted by two and in their eyes, as The Jiji Shimpo, one of parties, one following the road towards the leading journals, expresses it, 'America stands out in the world like a blossoming plum branch among a thicket of brambies, diffusing a rich fragrance and compelling the vigorous policy.' "America is Japan's largest customer in a commercial way, while, on the other hand, none of the staple products of the United states, except kerosene, find their way to Japan. "The railroads of Japan are constantly beng extended and there are now six comsanies, embracing about 700 miles of road. These are equipped with English locomotives, cars and rails, but Germany is making very effort to secure this trude, and a contract has recently been awarded to German firms for furnishing the rails for eight years. You would be surprised to see American street cars rolling along the streets of Tokio, but there are many of them, and these with the jinrikishu, or pullman cars, are the principal public conveyances. The latter may be hired for seventy-five cents a day, and the treet cars carry passengers for a moderate charge, ranging from two to eight cents, ac-cording to the distance traveled."—San Fran-cisco Chronicle.

Girls at the Seaside. I have carefully looked around me for some of those fair maids of the shore you read of in correspondence. But up to date none have arrived. The average girl canvas shoes rusted by the brine, an old seer-sucker dress, a hat mashed down on the south side, mashed up on the north, bruised, bent, broken and maltreated on the other two sides, and she digs a hole in the sand, fallinto it, puts on blue glasses and fights flies and reads dime novels. There is nothing jaunty-nothing picturesque-nothing to admire in the careless manner in which she raises a No. 5 shoe and kicks victously at an inquisitive fly .- M. Quad in Detroit Free
